

FRESNO STATERS DISPLAY SMOOTHER OFFENSE

HARD SCRIMMAGE SHOWS BULLDOGS CLICKING BETTER

Freshman And Third Stringers Give Varsity Long, Hard Test

A smoother working offense was the result last evening of the heavy scrimmage Leo Harris showed his Fresno State College Bulldogs through as they "stepped on the gas" in getting ready to open the season Saturday night against the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, at the stadium.

The Bulldogs bumped up against freshmen reserves last evening but planned to mingle with the fresh first team in the real test this evening. Stan Bariccko has a lot of big freshmen who should make the varsity lineup.

The varsity worked solely on defense and the team seems to be clicking much better than last week. All of which will be a welcome revelation to Harris, who has been wondering if his new combinations will be ready for the initial test.

There will be another heavy workout this evening, perhaps a scrimmage, and then Harris will start tapering his squad off for the Saturday night engagement.

Harris will begin picking definite starting players after the final scrimmage. About all of the positions are settled except two or three, both on the line and backfield. Roy Niewander is whipping the line into shape for the Cal Tech tussle and the forwards should be advanced enough to do their bit.

SPORT THINKS

By Ed W. Orman

Phil Brubaker may be displayed a dynamite right hand punch that will carry him places in the professional ranks of fighters, but certainly Bert Colima didn't give the ex-convict light heavyweight of Dinuba, the test that had been expected last night in Ryan's Arena.

Out of condition and only a shadow of the former middleweight, Colima was ushered out in the early seconds of the second round.

He had been expected to display some classy boxing that would make it tough on Brubaker, but the latter was without the opposition that he should have received.

In other words it was fairly easy sailing for Brubaker, although you can't deny he can sock. He didn't have to take "an last night, but he can do that, too.

But they should not Brubaker in semi-windup hours against rough, rugged battlers who will give him a test and bring out the ability of which he has all the earmarks of possessing.

Follows like Colima are all right when they are in condition, but not when they are as fat as the proverbial pig.

The way Adolph Camilli, ex-first baseman of the Sacramento coast league club, fits into the Chicago Cubs' lineup, has caused a lot of favorable comment to be written about the former Senator.

A Chicago writer claims Charley Glinum, a first baseman who is in the Chicago spot of passing judgment on his playing successor at first base, has given his unqualified endorsement of the hurly Italian; that the basic reason for Camilli's success is a marvelous knack of driving in runs at opportune times, and that in the field he has drawn ohs and ahs and even sudden rounds of applause with his startlingly sensational bits of fielding.

So it looks as though the knacker of driving in runs at opportune times, and that in the field he has drawn ohs and ahs and even sudden rounds of applause with his startlingly sensational bits of fielding.

A fighter who began his career around Fresno, the three Young Corbett, Young Jack Thompson and Baby Joe Gans were making sensational spurs up the fistie ladder, is back here again and anxious to display his batic warfare before Fresno fans who used to watch him knock opponents stiff with bristling blows from his right hand.

The fighter in mind is Billy Wallace, the likeable Cleveland lightweight. Billy dropped into town from a deer hunting expedition in the Sierra and told Promoter Jim Ryan he would give most anything to box here where he made his start.

Wallace's home really is in Oakland but he has been making his headquarters around Cleveland for a few years. During his campaign in the East he met the best in his class and fared very successfully, although he just missed getting into the championship realm.

In between fights he turned radio crooner.

Billy is headed toward Los Angeles where he expects to fight in the Olympic Arena but is ready for a call to come to Fresno. He probably will be seen here in a short time if a suitable opponent can be procured.

BRUBAKER PUTS COLIMA AWAY IN SECOND ROUND

Dinuhan Beats Veteran Mexican In Professional Ring Debut

By ED W. ORMAN

Phil Brubaker bounced into the professional boxing picture with a third last night when the Dinuba light heavyweight technically knocked out Bert Colima of Los Angeles, veteran Mexican, in the second round of a scheduled six-round bout in Ryan's Arena.

Appearing fat, out of condition and nowhere near the flashy, classy fighter he was when threatening midweight titles for the championship, Colima was knocked kicking with a right cross to the chin in the first few seconds of round two.

Brubaker had two knockdowns to his credit in the first round, but he was not satisfied. Brubaker cracked Colima on the chin with a right and sent the Mexican curling to the canvas in the first round. Colima then rushed into a clinch, but Brubaker missed him coming in, although he wrestled his opponent to the floor at the bell.

Colima's only punches were looping lefts to the head in the first round. He connected a few times, one punch opening a small cut under Brubaker's left eye.

Colima Out Of Shape

Brubaker came out dancing around Colima in the second. Settling an opening he shot in a left and a right to the chin. Colima hit the floor and rolled over. His seconds threw in the towel as Brubaker began to count and he stopped the effort to come back. Colima could have gotten to his feet, but he wouldn't have lasted. He wasn't in shape to box a boy like Brubaker.

Brubaker weighed 173 and Colima 169.

A crowd, many of whom were from Dinuba and other sections of the area district, all but filled the arena.

The young Speedy Dado-Al Austin six-rounder was the evening's best bout. The 117-pounder battled to a draw in a grudge fight in which the winner was to take the entire purse.

Dado got off to a fast start, flooring Austin with a left and right cross to the head for the count of eight at the end of the first round, as well as opening a cut above Austin's left eye, but the latter, who has San Diego rallied gallantly to come back strong and gain an even break.

Dado coasted in the second, but Austin took the third by pushing the scrap in a round that saw few blows landed. Dado grabbed the fourth with the more effective punching, while Austin shook Dado up with head punches in the fifth. It looked like the tiring Filipino would be put on the floor, but he stuck it out and came out in the sixth to exchange evenly with his opponent.

Nash Calderon, 120, Fresno, made another poor showing in the semifinal, losing the decision to Pete Bautista, long-armed Filipino, 117. Both missed a hundred punches and sagged around the ring most of the way in the first round, which the win for Martinez.

There is little to choose between the men in the field. Both are about the fastest men on their respective teams and can go and get them all over the park. Davis' relatively low batting average is offset in part by the lack of hitting in what the field calls the clutch.

The left fielder position involves a third player, for it's likely that the Giants will use Homer Peel against left-handed pitching. But of the two likely to start in Tuesday's opening game, Heinie Manush of the Senators must be rated above the younger opponent, Joe Moore.

Manush is one of baseball's mightiest hitters and has been since 1925 when he won the American League batting championship. He proved that he still swung a wicked bat this year when he became the first major leaguer to turn in 20 hits. The Husky Abnernan, who started out as a plumber, has an eleven-year average in the American League of .326. Moore is no such hitter but he has an ability to punch short singles when his mean run. Moore is tremendously fast and a sure fielder.

Another of the four, Leroy Parnell, worked against Boston yesterday and the Giants' shortstop lineup was beaten 3 to 2 by the Braves, giving the Red Sox a 2-1 lead in the series.

Brooklyn's manager, John McGraw, was expected to take their last competitive workout before the Washington series opens Tuesday.

Senators' Outfield Also Rated Above Giant Fly-Chasers

By STUART CAMERON (United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 27. Just as they held a paper edge in the infield so do the Washington Senators outfielders have an advantage over their world series rivals, the New York Giants.

Only in one of the three garden positions do the New Yorkers pack more class. That is in right field where stocky, hard-hitting, rifle-armed Mel Ott does his chores.

In his heyday, his opponent, Goose Goslin, would have to give nothing but the Louisa to any man who years have tipped the edge of the Senators' wings. Goslin still is a fine outfielder, but no longer a great one.

Of the Senator and Giant outfielders likely to lay service in next week's battle, Goslin is the only one who has been through world series fire. He played with Washington in the series of 1924 and 1925.

In addition to his natural ability will hold a technical advantage in the games played at the Polo Grounds here. Taking glancing flies off the right field wall is an art learned only by constant practice and Goslin, an amateur, has the angle to see a single scout by him for a double or a triple.

In the center field where Fred Schulte will be pitted against George Davis, not long removed from the major ranks, the Senators have an edge. It is a thin edge, however, being based on the thirty or more percentage points in batting held by Schulte, and the Washington player's greater experience.

There is little to choose between the men in the field. Both are about the fastest men on their respective teams and can go and get them all over the park. Davis' relatively low batting average is offset in part by the lack of hitting in what the field calls the clutch.

ANGELS SEW UP PACIFIC COAST BASEBALL PLAY

Los Angeles Scores 9-0-6 Victory Over Seals To Win Championship

(By The United Press)

Los Angeles held the 1933 Pacific Coast League title (to-day) after a ninth-inning spurt which defeated the San Francisco Seals last night 9 to 6 before a silvering crowd of 1,900 fans in Seals Stadium.

The victory left intact the seven-game lead the Angels held over Hollywood, which also won last night. Only six games remain on the schedule of each team.

The Angels finished in second place last season, behind the Portland Beavers. This year the Beavers are in third place, with slight chance of overtaking Hollywood.

Young Dick Ward was the winning pitcher. He granted nine hits while the Angels were touching Jimmy Zinn for sixteen.

The Angels won the game in the ninth when they scored four runs. Cronin's home run to center field, hits by Olesby and Bittmar brought in the scores.

The Seals made a desperate attempt to overcome the lead in the ninth when they scored two runs on a base on balls and hits by Demaggio and Fenlon. Ward checked the rally.

Gene Lillard's home run over the left field fence in the second inning gave the Angels a 2-0 lead. The Seals wiped out that advantage by scoring four runs in the third.

Hollywood defeated Missions 10 to 6 by scoring five runs in the second inning and adding the lead. The Seals got two runs in the ninth but Shenelback put down the uprising. He granted eleven hits to the Reds while the Stars were getting thirteen from Johnson and Oshorn's two-run burst in the ninth broke a deadlock and gave the Indians a 5-to-3 victory over Portland. Ulrich granted the Beavers ten hits, while Freitas gave the Indians twelve.
